

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A data protocol permitting a source computer to initiate execution of an execution process on a destination computer uses XML data in which different complex data types correspond to different execution processes to be triggered. Parameter data to be used by the associated execution processes may be embedded within the corresponding complex data types.

[Figure 8]